It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

This Discourse, on the Excellency and Nobleness of True Religion, was first published in 1660, in a 4to. volume, with other Treatises of the same Author, entitled Select Discourses, &c., by John Smith, late Fellow of Queen's College, in Cambridge. The second Edition was published in 1673, also in 4to.

John Smith was born at Thorpe-Achurch, near Oundle, Northamptonshire. He completed his education at Emanuel College, Cambridge, and in 1640 was elected Fellow of Queen's College, in which he died, August 7th, 1752, in his 35th year. He was buried in the same College, where his Funeral Sermon was preached by Dr. Patrick, then Fellow of Queen's College, and afterwards Bishop of Ely.

One peculiarity which attracts our attention in these published Discourses is, the frequent use of Italics and Capital letters. Both of these, however, may be accounted for by the necessity the Lecturer was under of making his Discourse clearer to those who heard him, by the use of Emphasis. If he wanted to give greater prominence to one portion of a Sentence beyond another, he would underscore the words; or to one Word beyond another, he would commence that Word with a Capital. In printed books such signs of Emphasis usually take the form of italics and capitals; but in lectures orally delivered, the stress when laid on the words by the voice is sufficient. By these means the varying force of all words may be sufficiently indicated. Both signs have been, for this reason, preserved in the present Reprint, and by means of these it may be said of the Lecturer-"He, being dead, yet speaketh." Greek Article was used, probably, for this purpose. It confers Emphasis on one Word above another, and on one phrase of a sentence above another: as, "a Good man, from the Good treasure," &c., and "what The rising from the dead should mean."

Another peculiarity belongs only to the present Reprint, and for this the Editor must be held accountable. He has omitted all the passages quoted by the Author from the writings of Greek and Roman Philosophers, or Jewish Rabbis. In the College Exercises it was natural, and perhaps desirable, that they should be introduced; but as the present Reprint is addressed only to English readers,—as the argument is made complete by the Author in the English language, requiring no word to be added, or retrenched, to make the sense perfect when the quotations are left out,—above all, as the authorities are of the highest kind, being taken either from the Old or New Testament, it seemed superfluous to have recourse to any human testimony in corroboration of them: it was like bringing in Candles to assist the Sun when he was shining at noon-day.

Whether the Author would have approved of what has been done, had he lived to edit his own writings, can only be conjectured. The Discourses were written on loose and scattered sheets of paper, and had none of them the benefit of the Author's final revision. "By a lethargic distemper," says Dr. Patrick, "which seized on his spirits, he passed the last six days of his life (if I may call it a life) in a kind of sleep; and without taking much notice of anything, he slept in the Lord."

The Editor can only hope, that the advantage which he has derived from making this work his frequent companion will be experienced by all those who find pleasure in its perusal.

VERIDICUS.

TRUE RELIGION.

The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath." (Proverbs xv. 24.)

THE INTRODUCTION.

In this whole Book of the Proverbs we find Solomon, one of the Eldest Sons of Wisdom, always standing up and calling her blessed: his Heart was both enlarged and filled with the pure Influences of her beams, and therefore was perpetually adoring that Sun which gave him light. Wisdom is justified of all her Children; though the brats of darkness and children of folly see no beauty nor comeliness in her, that they should desire her. That Mind which is not touched with an inward sense of Divine Wisdom, cannot estimate the true Worth of it. But when Wisdom once displays its own excellencies and glories in a purified Soul, it is entertained there with the greatest love and delight, and receives its own image reflected back to itself in sweetest returns of Love and Praise. We have a clear manifestation of this sacred Sympathy in Solomon, whom we may not unfitly call an Instrument which Wisdom herself had tuned to play her divine Lessons upon: his words were everywhere full of Divine sweetness, matched with strength and beauty, or, as he himself phrases it, like apples of gold in pictures of Silver. mind of a Proverb is to utter Wisdom in a Mystery, as the Apostle sometimes speaks, and to wrap up Divine Truth in a kind of Enigmatical way, though in common expressions. Which method of delivering Divine doctrine (not to mention the Writings of the ancient Philosophers) we find frequently pursued in the Holy Scripture, thereby both opening and hiding at once the Truth which is offered to us. A Proverb or Parable being once unfolded, by reason of its affinity with the Fancy, the more sweetly insinuates itself into that, and is from thence with the greater advantage transmitted to the Understanding. In this state we are not able to behold Truth in its own Native beauty and lustre; but while we are veiled with mortality, Truth must veil itself too, that it may the more freely converse with St. Austin hath well assigned the reason why we are so much delighted with Metaphors, Allegories, &c., because they are so much proportioned to our Senses, with which our Reason hath contracted an intimacy and familiarity. And therefore God, to accommodate his Truth to our weak capacities, does as it were embody it in Earthly expressions.

Thus much by way of Preface or Introduction to these words, being one of Solomon's excellent Proverbs, viz., The way of life is above to the wise. Without any mincing or mangling of the Words, or running out into any Critical curiosities about them, I shall from these Words take occasion to set forth The Nobleness and. Generous Spirit of True Religion, which I suppose to be meant here by THE WAY The word here rendered ABOVE OR LIFE. may signify that which is divine and heavenly, high and excellent, as the original word does in the New Testament, the HIGH calling of God, Phil. iii. 14. Set your affections on things Above, Col. iii. 2. St. Austin supposeth the things of Religion to be meant by the things ABOVE. And in this sense I shall consider it, my purpose being from hence to discourse of the Excellent and Noble spirit of true Religion, (whether it be taken in the abstract, as it is in itself; or in the concrete, as it becomes an inward Form and Soul to the Minds and Spirits of Good men;) and this in opposition to that low and base-born spirit of Irreligion, which is perpetually sinking from God, till it couches to the very Centre of misery, the lowermost Hell.

In discoursing upon this Argument, I shall observe this Method; viz., I shall consider the Excellency and Nobleness of true Religion—

1. In

- 1. In its Rise and Original.
- 2. In its Nature and Essence.
- 3. In its Properties and Operations.
- 4. In its Progress.
- 5. In its Term and End.

CHAPTER I.

WE begin with the First, viz., True Religion is a Noble thing in its Rise and Original, and in regard of its Descent. True Religion derives its pedigree from Heaven, it comes from Heaven, and constantly moves toward Heaven again: a Beam from God, as every good and perfect gift is from above, and comes down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning, as St. James God is the First Truth and speaks. Primitive Goodness: True Religion is a vigorous Efflux and Emanation of Both upon the Spirits of men, and therefore is called a participation of the divine Nature.*

^{* 2} Peter i. 4.

Indeed, God hath copied out himself in all created Being, having no other Pattern to frame anything by but his own Essence; so that all created Being is, by some stamp or other of God upon it, at least remotely allied to him. But True Religion is such a Communication of the Divinity, as none but the Highest of created Beings are capable of. On the other side, Sin and Wickedness is of the basest and lowest Original, as being nothing else but a perfect degeneration from God and those Eternal Rules of Goodness which are derived from him. Religion is an Heavenborn thing, the seed of God in the Spirits of men, whereby they are formed to a similitude and likeness of himself. Christian is every way of a most noble Extraction, of an heavenly and divine pedigree, being born from above, as it is expressed, John iii. The line of all earthly Nobility, if it were followed to the beginning, would lead to Adam, where all the lines of descent meet in One: and the Root of all Extractions would be found planted in nothing else but Adamah, red Earth. But a Christian derives his line from Christ, who is the Only-begotten Son of God, the shining forth of his glory, and the Character of his person, as he is styled, Heb. i. We may truly say of Christ and Christians, as Zebah and Zalmunna said of Gideon's brethren, As he is, so are they (according to their capacity), each one resembling the children of a king. Titles of Worldly honour in Heaven's heraldry are but only nominal titles: but Titles of Divine dignity signify some Real thing, some Real and Divine Communications to the Spirits and Minds of men. All Perfections and Excellencies in any kind are to be measured by their approach to that Primitive Perfection of all, God himself; and therefore Participation of the Divine nature cannot but entitle a Christian to the highest degree of dignity. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God, 1 John iii. 1.

Thus much for a more general discovery of the Nobleness of Religion as to its Fountain and Original. We may further and more particularly take notice tice of this in reference to that Twofold fountain in God, from whence all true Religion flows and issues forth, viz., 1. His Immutable Nature. 2. His Will.

1. The Immutable Nature of God. From thence arise all those Eternal Rules of Truth and Goodness which are the Foundation of all Religion, and which God at the first Creation folded up in the Soul of man. These we may call the Truths of Natural inscription; understanding hereby either those Fundamental principles of Truth which Reason by a naked intuition may behold in God, or those necessary Corollaries and Deduc-. tions that may be drawn from thence. cannot think it so proper to say, That God ought infinitely to be loved because he commands it, as because he is indeed an Infinite and Unchangeable Goodness. God hath stamped a Copy of his own archetypal Loveliness upon the Soul, that man, by reflecting into himself, might behold there the glory of God-see within his Soul all those Ideas of Truth which concern the Nature and Essence of God, by reason of its own resemblance of God; and so beget within himself the most free and generous motions of Love to God. Reason in man being a Light flowing from the Fountain and Father of Lights, and being the Law written in man's Heart, it was to enable Man to work out of himself all those Notions of God which are the true Groundwork of Love and Obedience to God, and conformity to him: and in moulding the inward man into the greatest conformity to the Nature of God was the Perfection and Efficacy of the Religion of Nature. since Man's fall from God, the inward virtue and vigour of Reason is much abated: those Principles of Divine Truth which were first engraven upon man's Heart with the finger of God are now, as the Characters of some ancient Monuments, less clear and legible than at first. And therefore besides the Truth of Natural inscription-

2. God hath provided the Truth of Divine Revelation, which issues forth from his own free Will, and clearly discovers the way of our return to God, from whom we are fallen. And this Truth, with the Effects and Productions of it in the Minds of men, the Scripture is wont to set forth under the name of Grace, as proceeding merely from the free bounty and overflowings of the Divine Love. Of this Revealed Will is that of the Apostle to be understood, None hath known the things of God.* None, neither Angel nor Man, could know the Mind of God, could unlock the Breast of God, or search out the Counsels of his Will. But God, out of the infinite riches of his Compassions toward mankind, is pleased to unbosom his Secrets, and most clearly to manifest the way into the Holiest of all,† and bring to light life and immortality, 1 and in these last ages to send his Son, who lay in his bosom from all Eternity, to teach us his Will and declare his Mind to us. When we look unto the Earth, then behold darkness and dimness of anguish, that I may use those words of the Prophet Isaiah. But when we look towards Heaven, then behold light breaking forth upon us, like the Eyelids of the Morning, and spreading *1 Cor. ii. 21. † Heb. ix. 12 Tim. i.

its wings over the Horizon of mankind sitting in darkness and the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

But besides this Outward revelation of God's will to men, there is also an Inward impression of it on their Minds and Spirits, which is in a more special manner attributed to God. We cannot see divine things but in a divine light; God only, who is the true light, and in whom there is no darkness at all, can so shine out of himself upon our glassy Understandings, as to beget in them a picture of himself, his own Will and Pleasure, and turn the Soul (as the phrase is in Job xxxviii. 14) like wax or clay to the Seal of his own light and love. He that made our Souls in his own image and likeness, can easily find a way into them. The Word that God speaks having found a way into the Soul, imprints itself there as with the point of a diamond. Men may teach the Grammar and Rhetoric, but God teaches the Divinity. Thus it is God alone that acquaints the Soul with the Truths of Revelation: and he also it is that does strengthen and raise the Soul to better apprehensions prehensions even of Natural Truth: God being that in the Intellectual world which the Sun is in the Sensible.

CHAPTER II.

We have done with the first Head, and come now to discourse with the like brevity on another (our purpose being to insist most upon the third Particular, viz., The Nobleness of Religion in its Properties,) after we have handled the second, which is, The Excellency and Nobleness of Religion in regard of its Nature, which we shall treat of promiscuously, without any rigid tying of ourselves to exact Rules of Art: and so we shall glance at it in these following Notions, rising, as it were, step by step.

1. A Good man, that is actuated by Religion, lives above the World and all Mundane delights and excellencies. The Soul is a more vigorous and puissant thing, when it is once restored to the possession of its own Being, than to be bounded within the narrow Sphere of Mortality, or to be straitened within the narrow prison of Sensual and Corporeal delights; but it will break forth with the greatest vehemency, and ascend upwards towards Immortality: and when it converses more intimately with Religion, it can scarce look back upon its own converses (though in a lawful way) Earthly things, without a being touched with an holy Shamefacedness and a modest Blushing; it seems to be ashamed that it should be in the Body. It is only True Religion that teaches and enables men to die to this world and to all Earthly things, and to rise above that vaporous Sphere of Sensual and Earthly pleasures, which darken the Mind and hinder it from enjoying the brightness of Divine light; the proper motion of Religion is still upwards to its first Original. Whereas, on the contrary, the Souls of wicked men, being moistened with the Exudations of their Sensual parts, become heavy and sink down into Earthly things, and couch as near as may be to the Centre. Wicked men bury their Souls in their Bodies: all their proiects jects and designs are bounded within the compass of this Earth which they tread upon. The Fleshly mind never minds any thing but Flesh, and never rises above the Outward Matter, but always creeps up and down like Shadows upon the Surface of the Earth: and if it begins at any time to make any faint assays upwards, it presently finds itself laden with a weight of Sensuality which draws it down again. It was the Opinion of the Academics that the Souls of wicked men, after their death, could not of a long season depart from the Graves and Sepulchres where their Mates were buried; but there wandered up and down in a desolate manner, as not being able to leave those Bodies which they were so much wedded to in this life.

2. A Good man, one that is actuated by Religion, lives in converse with his own Reason; he lives at the height of his own Being. He knows how to converse with himself, and truly to love and value himself: he measures not himself, like the Epicure, by his inferior and Earthly part, but by an Immortal Essence, and that that of him which is from above; and so does he climb up to the height of that Immortal principle which is within him. He principally looks upon himself as being what he is rather by his Soul than by his Body: he values himself by his Soul, that Being which hath the greatest affinity with God; and so does not seek himself in the fading Vanities of this life, nor in those poor and low delights. of his Senses, as wicked men do; and when the Soul thus retires into itself, and views its own worth and Excellency, it presently finds a chaste and Virginlove stirred up within itself towards itself, and is from within the more excited and obliged to mind the preserving of its own dignity and glory. To conclude this Particular, A Good man endeavours to walk by Eternal and Unchangeable Rules of Reason. Reason in a Good man sits in the Throne, and governs all the Powers of his Soul in a sweet harmony and agreement with itself; whereas in wicked men there is a Democracy of wild Lusts and Passions, which violently violently hurry the Soul up and down with restless motions. All Sin and Wickedness is a Sedition stirred up in the Soul by the Sensitive Powers against Reason. It was one of the great Evils that Solomon saw under the Sun, Servants on horseback, and Princes going as servants upon the ground.* We may find the Moral of it in every wicked man, whose Souls are only as Servants to wait upon their Senses. all such men the whole Course of Nature is turned upside down, and the Cardinal points of Motion in this little world are changed to contrary positions. But the Motions of a Good man are Methodical, Regular, and Concentrical to Reason. is a fond imagination that Religion should extinguish Reason; when as Religion makes it more illustrious and vigorous; and they that live most in the exercise of Religion, shall find their Reason most enlarged. I might add, that Reason in relation to the capacitating of Man for converse with God was thought by some to be the Formal Difference of Man.

Plutarch after a long debate whether Brutes had no Reason in them as well as Man, concludes it negatively upon this ground, Because they had no knowledge and sense of the Deity. In Tully's account this Capableness of Religion seemed to be nothing different from Rationality, and therefore he doubts not to give this for the most proper Characterism of Reason; Reason as enabling and fitting Man to converse with God by knowing him and loving him, being a character most unquestionably differencing Man from Brute creatures.

3. A Good man, one that is informed by True Religion, lives above himself, and is raised to an intimate Converse with the Divinity. He moves in a larger Sphere than his own Being, and cannot be content to enjoy himself, except he may enjoy God too, and himself in God.

This we shall consider two ways.

1. In the Self-denial of Good men; they are content and ready to deny themselves for God. I mean not that they should deny their own Reason, as some would have it; for that were to deny a Beam of C Divine

Divine light, and so to deny God, instead of denying ourselves for him. But by Self-denial I mean, the Soul's quitting all its own interest in itself, and an entire Resignation of itself to him as to all points of service and duty: and thus the Soul loves itself in God, and lives in the possession not so much of its own Being as of the Divinity; desiring only to be great in God, to glory in his Light, and spread itself in his Fulness; to be filled always by him, and to empty itself again into him; to receive all from him, and to expend all for him; and so to live not as its own, but as God's. The highest ambition of a Good man is to serve the Will of God: he takes no pleasure in himself nor in any thing within himself further than he sees a stamp of God upon it. Whereas wicked men are imprisoned within the narrow circumference of their own Beings, and perpetually frozen into a cold Self-love which binds up all the Innate vigour of their Souls, that it cannot break forth or express itself in any noble way. The Soul in which Religion rules, says as St. Paul did, I live; and yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. On the contrary, a Wicked man swells in his own thoughts, and pleaseth himself more or less with the of a imagination Self-sufficiency. this is more or less the Genius of Wicked men, they will be something in themselves, they wrap up themselves in their own Being, move up and down in a Sphere of Self-love, live a professed Independency upon God, and maintain a Meum and Tuum between God and themselves. It is the Character only of a Good man to be able to deny and disown himself, and to make a full surrender of himself unto God; forgetting himself, and minding nothing but the Will of his Creator; triumphing in nothing more than in his own Nothingness, and in the Allness of the Divinity. But indeed this his being Nothing is the only way to be all things; this his having nothing the truest way of possessing all things.

2. As a Good man lives above himself in a way of Self-denial, so he lives also above himself as he lives in the Enjoyment of God: and this is the very Soul and Essence of True Religion, to unite the Soul in the nearest intimacy and conjunc-Then indeed the Soul tion with God lives most nobly, when it feels itself to live and move and have its Being in God; which though the Law of Nature makes it the Common condition of all created Being, yet it is only True Religion that can give us a more feeling and comfortable sense of it. God is not present to Wicked men, when his Almighty Essence supports them and maintains them in Being; but he is present to him that can touch him, hath an inward feeling knowledge of God and is intimately united to him; but to him that cannot thus touch him he is not present.

Religion is Life and Spirit, which flowing out from God who hath life in himself, returns to him again as into its own Original, carrying the Souls of Good men up with it. The Spirit of Religion is always ascending upwards, and spreading itself through the whole Essence of the Soul, loosens it from a Self-confinement and narrowness, and so renders it more capacious of Divine Enjoyment. envies not his people any good, but being infinitely bountiful is pleased to impart himself to them in this life, so far as they are capable of his Communications: they stay not for all their happiness till they come to heaven. Religion always carries its reward along with it, and when it acts most vigorously upon the Mind and Spirit of man, it then most of all fills it with an inward sense of Divine sweetness. To conclude, To walk with God is in Scripture made the Character of a Good man, and it is the highest perfection and privilege of Created Nature to converse with the Divinity. Whereas on the contrary Wicked men converse with nothing but their Lusts and the Vanities of this fading life, which here flatter them for a while with unhallowed delights, and a mere Shadow of Contentment: and when these are gone, they find both Substance and Shadow too to be lost Eternally. true Goodness brings in a constant revenue of solid and substantial Satisfaction to the Spirit

Spirit of a good man, delighting always to sit by those Eternal Springs that feed and maintain it: the Spirit of a Good man is always drinking in Fountain-Goodness, and fills itself more and more, till it be filled with all the fulness of God.

CHAPTER III.

Having discoursed on the Nobleness of Religion in its Original and Nature; we come now to consider the Excellency of Religion in its Properties, its proper Effects and vital Operations. In treating of this Third Particular we shall (as formerly we have done), without tying ourselves precisely to any strict Rules of Art and Method, confound the Notions of Religion in the abstract and in the concrete together, handling them promiscuously. As Religion is a noble thing, 1. in respect of its Original, 2. in respect of its Nature; so also 3. in respect of its Properties and Effects.

The

The First Property and Effect of True Religion whereby it expresseth its own Nobleness is this, That it widens and enlarges all the Faculties of the Soul, and begets a true Ingenuousness, Liberty and Amplitude, the most free and Generous Spirit, in the Minds of Good men. in whom Religion rules have a true Generous Spirit within them, which shows the Nobleness of their Extraction. But this is most true of Religion, that in a higher sense it does work the Soul into a true and divine amplitude. There is a living Soul of Religion in Good men, which spreading itself through all their Faculties, spirits all the Wheels of motion, and enables them to dilate and extend themselves more fully upon God and all Divine things. without being pinched or straitened within themselves. Whereas wicked men are of most narrow and confined Spirits, they are so contracted by the pinching particularities of Earthly and created things, so imprisoned in a dark dungeon of Sensuality and Selfishness, so straitened through their Carnal designs and Ends, that they cannot cannot stretch themselves nor look beyond the Horizon of Time and Sense.

The nearer any Being comes to God, who is that Infinite fulness that fills all in all, the more vast and large and unbounded it is; as the further it slides from him, the more it is straitened and confined; as Plato hath long since concluded concerning the condition of Sensual men, that they live like a Shell-fish, and can never move up and down but in their own prison, which they ever carry about with them. Were I to define Sin, I would call it The sinking of a Man's Soul from God into a Sensual Selfishness. All the Freedom that wicked men have, is but (like that of banished men) to wander up and down in the wilderness of this world from one den and cave to another.

The more high and Noble any Being is, so much the deeper radication have all its Innate virtues and Properties within it, and are by so much the more Universal in their issues and actings upon other things: and such an inward living principle of virtue and activity further heightened and united and

and informed with Light and Truth, we may call Liberty. Of this truly-noble and divine Liberty Religion is the Mother and Nurse, leading the Soul to God, and so impregnating that inward vital principle of activity and vigour that is embosomed in it, that it is able without any inward disturbance and resistance from any controlling Lusts to exercise itself, and act with the greatest complacency in the most full and ample manner upon that First, Universal and Unbounded Essence which is God him-The most generous Freedom can never be took in its full and just dimensions and proportion, but then when all the Powers of the Soul exercise and spend themselves in the most large and ample manner upon the Infinite and Essential Goodness, as upon their own most proper Object. If we should ask a Good man, when he finds himself best at ease, when he finds himself most free; his answer would be, When he is under the most powerful constraints of divine Love. There are a sort of Mechanical Christians in the world, that not finding Religion acting like a living form within them, satisfy themselves only to make an Art of it, and rather inform and actuate it, than are informed by it; and setting it such bounds and limits as may not exceed the short and scant measures of their own homeborn Principles, then they endeavour to fit the Notions of their own Minds as so many Examples to it: and it being a Circle of their own making, they can either ampliate or contract it accordingly as they can force their own Minds and Dispositions to agree and suit with it. true Religion indeed is no Art, but an inward Nature that contains all the laws and measures of its motion within itself. A Good man finds not his Religion without him, but as a living Principle within him; and all his Faculties are still endeavouring to unite themselves more and more in the nearest intimacy with it as with their proper Perfection. There is that amiableness in Religion, that strong Sympathy between the Soul and it, that it needs carry no Testimonials or Commendations along with it. If it could be supposed that God should plant plant a Religion in the Soul that had no affinity or alliance with it, it would grow there but as a strange slip. But God when he gives his Laws to men, does not by virtue of his Absolute dominion dictate anything at random, and in such an arbitrarious way as some imagine; but he measures all by his own Eternal Goodness. Had God himself been anything else than the First and Greatest Good of man, then to have loved him with the full strength of all our Faculties should not have been the First and Greatest Commandment, as our Saviour tells us it is. Some are apt to look upon God as some Peevish and Selfwilled thing, because themselves are such: and seeing that their own Absolute and naked Wills are for the most part the Rules of all their actions and the impositions which they lay upon others; they think that Heaven's Monarchy is such an arbitrary thing too, as being governed by nothing else but by an Almighty Absolute Will. But the Soul that is acquainted most intimately with the Divine Will, would more certainly resolve us, That God's God's Unchangeable Goodness (which makes the Divinity an Uniform thing and to settle together upon its own Centre, as I may speak with reverence) is also the Unchangeable Rule of his Will; neither can he any more swerve from it, than he can swerve from himself. Nor does he charge any Duty upon man without consulting first of all with his Goodness: which being the Original and adequate Object of a Good man's Will and affections, it must needs be that all the issues and effluxes of it be entertained with an answerable complacency and cheerfulness. This is the hinge upon which all true Religion turns, the proper Centre about which it moves; which taking a fast and sure hold of an innate and correspondent Principle in the Soul of man, raiseth it up above the confines of Mortality, and in the day of its mighty power makes it become a free-will Offering unto God.

CHAPTER IV.

THE Second Property or Effect of Religion, whereby it discovers its own Nobleness (and it is somewhat akin to the former Particular, and will help further to illustrate and enforce it) is this, That it restores a Good man to a just power and dominion over himself and his own Will, enables him to overcome himself, his own Self-will and Passions, and to command himself and all his Powers for God. 'Tis only Religion that restores that which the Stoical Philosophy so impotently pretended to; it is this only that enthrones man's deposed Reason, and establisheth within him a just Empire over all those blind Powers and Passions which so impetuously rend a man from the possession and enjoyment of him-Those turbulent and unruly, uncertain and inconstant Motions of Passion and Self-will that dwell in degenerate Minds, divide them perpetually from themselves, and are always moulding several factions and tumultuous combinations within them against the dominion of Reason. And the only only way to unite man firmly to himself is by uniting him to God, and establishing in him a firm amity and agreement with the First and Primitive Being.

There is nothing in the World so boisterous as a man's own Self-will, which is never guided by any fixed or steady Rules, but is perpetually hurried to and fro by a blind and furious impetus of Pride and Passions issuing from within itself. This is the true source and Spring of all that Envy, Malice, Bitterness of Spirit, Malcontentedness, and Impatiency, of all those black and dark Passions, those inordinate desires and lusts, that reign in the hearts and lives of wicked men. A man's own Self-will throws him out of all true enjoyment of his own Being: therefore it was our Saviour's counsel to his disciples, In patience possess your Souls. We may say of that Self-will, which is lodged in the heart of a wicked man, that it is the Seed of the Evil Spirit which is perpetually at enmity with the Seed of God and the Heaven-born Nature. Its design and scope is with a Giant-like pride to climb up into the

the Throne of the Almighty, and to establish an unbounded Tyranny in contradiction to the Will of God, which is nothing else but the Issue and Efflux of his Eternal and Unbounded Goodness. This is the verv Heart of the old Adam that is within men. This is the Hellish Spirit of Self-will: it would solely prescribe laws to all things; it would fain be the source and fountain of all affairs and events; it would judge all things at its own Tribunal. They in whose Spirits this Principle rules, would have their own Fancies and Opinions, their perverse and boisterous Wills to be the just Square and Measure of all Good and Evil; these are the Plumb-lines they apply to all things to find out their Rectitude or Obli-He that will not submit himself to, nor comply with the Eternal and Uncreated Will, but instead of it endeavours to set up his own will, makes himself the most real Idol in the world, and exalts himself against all that is called God and ought to be worshipped. To worship a graven image, or to make cakes and burn incense to the Queen of heaven, is not a worse Idolatry

Idolatry than it is for a man to set up Selfwill, to devote himself to the serving of it, and to give up himself to a compliance with his own will as contrary to the Divine and Eternal Will. When God made the World, he did not make it merely for the exercise of his Almighty power, and then throw it out of his hands, and leave it alone to subsist by itself as a thing that had no further relation to him: But he derived himself through the whole Creation, so gathering and knitting up all the several pieces of it again; that as the first production and the continued Subsistence of all things is from himself, so the ultimate resolution and tendency of all things might be to him. Now that which first endeavoured a Divorce between God and his Creation, and to make a Conquest of it, was that Diabolical Arrogancy and Selfwill that crept up and wound itself Serpentlike into apostate Minds and Spirits. is the true strain of that Hellish nature, to live independently of God, and to derive the Principles from another Beginning, and carry on the line of all motions and operations operations to another End, than God himself, by whom and to whom and for whom all things subsist.

From what hath been said concerning this powerful and dangerous Enemy that wars against our Souls and against the Divine Will, may the Excellency and Noble Spirit of True Religion appear, in that it tames the impetuousness and turbulency of this Self-will. Then indeed does Religion perform the highest and bravest conquests, then does it display the greatness of its strength and the excellency of its power, when it overcomes this Self-will that hath so firmly seated himself in the very Centre of the Soul. This was the grand Lesson that our great Lord and Master came to teach us, viz. To deny our own Wills; neither was there anything that he endeavoured more to promote by his own Example, as he tells us of himself, *I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me; and again, †Lo, I come (in the volume of the Book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God, yea thy Law is within my heart: and in his greatest agonies, with a clear and cheerful submission to the Divine will, he often repeats it, *Not my will, but thy will be done: and so he hath taught us to pray and so to live. indeed is the true life and spirit of Religion, this is Religion in its Meridian altitude, its just dimensions. A true Christian that hath power over his own Will, may live nobly and happily, and enjoy a perpetually-clear heaven within the Serenity of his own Mind. When the Sea of this World is most rough and tempestuous about him, then can he ride safely at Anchor within the haven, by a sweet compliance of his will with God's Will. He can look about him, and with an even and indifferent Mind behold the World either to smile or frown upon him; neither will he abate of the least of his Contentment, for all the ill and unkind usage he meets withal in this life. He that hath got the Mastery over his own Will, feels no violence from without, finds no contests within; and like a strong man, keeping his house, he preserves all his Goods in safety: and when God calls for him out of this state of Mortality, he finds in himself a power to lay down his own life; neither is it so much taken from him, as quietly and freely surrendered up by him. This is the highest piece of prowess, the noblest achievement, by which a man becomes Lord over himself, and the Master of his own Thoughts, Motions, and Purposes. This is the Royal prerogative, the high dignity conferred upon Good men by our Lord and Saviour, whereby they overcoming this both His and their Enemy, their Self-will and Passions, are enabled to sit down with him in his Throne, as he overcoming in another way, is set down with his Father in his Throne; as the phrase is Revelations, iii.

Religion begets the most Heroic, Free and Generous motions in the Minds of Good men. There is nowhere so much of a truly Magnanimous and raised Spirit as in those who are best acquainted with the power of Religion. Other men are Slaves and Captives to one Vanity or other: but the truly Religious is above them all, and able to command himself and all his Powers for God. That bravery and gallantness which seems to be in the great Nimrods of this world is nothing else but the swelling of their own unbounded pride and vain-glory. It hath been observed of the greatest Monarchs of the world, that in the midst of their Triumphs they themselves have been led Captives to one Vice or another. All the Gallantry and Puissance which the Bravest Spirits of the world boast of, is but a poor confined thing, and extends itself only to some Particular Cases and Circumstances. But the Valour and Puissance of a Soul impregnated by Religion hath in a sort an Universal Extent, as St. Paul speaks of himself, I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me; it is not determined to this or that Particular Object or Time or Place, but all things whatsoever belong to a Creature fall under the level thereof. Religion is by St. Paul described to be the Spirit of power in opposition to Spirit

Spirit of fear, 2 Tim. 1. Sin by its deadly infusions into the Soul of man wastes and eats out the innate vigour of the Soul, and casts it into such a deep Lethargy, as that it is not able to recover itself. But Religion, being once conveyed into the Soul, awakens and enlivens it, and makes it renew its strength like an Eagle, and mount strongly upwards towards Heaven; and so uniting the Soul to God, the Centre of life and strength, it renders it undaunted and invincible. Who can tell the inward life and vigour that the Soul may be filled with, when once it is in conjunction with an Almighty Essence? There is a latent and hidden virtue in the Soul of man which then begins to discover itself when the Divine Spirit spreads forth its influences upon it. Every thing the more Spiritual it is, and the higher and nobler it is in its Being, the more active and vigorous it is: as the more anything falls and sinks into Matter, the more dull and sluggish and unwieldy it is. Now nothing doth more purify, more sublimate and exalt the Soul than Religion, when the Soul suffers God to sit within it as a refiner and purifier of Silver, and when it abides the day of his coming; for he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap, Mal. 111. Thus the Soul being purified and spiritualized, and changed more amd more into the glorious Image of God, is able to do all things, out of weakness is made strong, gives proof of its Divine vigour and activity, and shows itself to be a Noble and Puissant Spirit, such as God did at first create it.

CHAPTER V.

THE Third Property or Effect whereby Religion discovers its own Excellency, is this, That it directs and enables a man to propound to himself the Best End and Scope of life, viz. The Glory of God the Highest Being, and his own assimilation or becoming like unto God.

That Christian in whom Religion rules powerfully, is not so low in his ambitions, as to pursue any of the things of this world as his Ultimate End: his Soul is too big for earthly designs and interests; but understanding himself to come from God, he is continually returning to him again. It is not worth the while for the Mind of Man to pursue any Perfection lower than its own, or to aim at any End more ignoble than itself is. There is nothing that more straitens and confines the free-born Soul than the particularity, indigency, and penury, of that End which it pursues. When it complies most of all with this lower world, the true Nobleness and Freedom of it is then most disputable, and the Title it holds to true Liberty, becomes most litigious. It never more slides and degenerates from itself, than when it becomes enthralled to some Particular interest: as on the other side it never acts more freely or fully, than when it extends itself upon the most Universal End. As low Ends debase aman's spirit, supplant and rob it of its birthright; so the Highest and Last End raises and ennobles it, and enlarges it into a more Universal and comprehensive Capacity of enjoying that one Unbounded Goodness which is God himself: it makes it spread spread and dilate itself in the Infinite Sphere of the Divine Being and Blessedness, it makes it live in the Fulness of Him that fills all in all.

Everything is most properly such as the End is which is simed at: the Mind of man is always shaping itself into a conformity as much as may be to that which is his End; and the nearer it draws to it in the achievement thereof, the greater likeness it bears to it. There is a Plastic Virtue, a Secret Energy issuing forth from that which the Mind propounds to itself as its End, to mould and fashion it according to its own Model. The Soul is always stamped with the same Characters that are engraven upon the End it aims at; and while it converses with it, and sets itself before, it is turned as Wax to the Seal, to use that phrase in Job. Man's Soul conceives all its Thoughts and Imaginations before his End, as *Laban's Ewes did their young before the Rods in the watering troughs. He that pursues any worldly interest or earthly thing as his End, becomes himself also Earthly: and the more the Soul directs itself to God, the more it becomes Godlike, deriving a print of that glory and beauty upon itself which it converseth with, as it is excellently set forth by the Apostle, But we all with open face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory. That Spirit of Ambition and Popularity that so violently transports the Minds of men into a pursuit of Vain-glory, makes them as vain as that Popular air they live upon: the Spirit of this world that draws forth a man's designs after worldly interests, makes him as unstable, inconstant, tumultuous and perplexed a thing as the world is. On the contrary, the Spirit of true Religion steering and directing the Mind and Life to God, makes it an Uniform, Stable and quiet thing, as God himself is: it is only true Goodness in the Soul of man guiding it steadily and uniformly towards God, directing it and all its actions to the one Last End and Chief Good, that can give it a true consistency and composedness within itself.

All Self-seeking and Self-love do but imprison prison the Soul, and confine it to its own home: the Mind of a Good man is too Noble, too Big for such a Particular life; he hath learned to despise his own Being in comparison of that Uncreated Beauty and Goodness which is so infinitely transcendent to himself or any created thing; he reckons upon his choice and best affections and designs as too choice and precious a treasure to be spent upon such a poor sorry thing as himself, or upon any thing else but God himself.

This was the life of Christ, and is in some degree the life of every one that partakes of the Spirit of Christ. Such Christians seek not their own glory, but the glory of him that sent them into this world: they know they were brought forth into this world, not to set up or drive a trade for themselves, but to serve the will and pleasure of him that made them, and to finish that work he hath appointed them. It were not worth the while to have been born or to live, had it been only for such a penurious End as ourselves are: it is most God-like and best suits with the Spirit of Religion, for a Christian to live wholly wholly to God, to live the life of God, having his own life hid with Christ in God; and thus in a sober sense he becomes Deified. This indeed is such a Deification as is not transacted merely upon the stage of Fancy by Arrogance and Presumption, but in the highest Powers of the Soul by a living and quickening Spirit of true Religion there uniting God and the Soul together in the Unity of Affections, Will and End.

I should now pass from this to another Particular; but because many are apt to misapprehend the Notion of God's glory, and flatter themselves with their pretended and imaginary aiming at the Glory of God, I think it may be of good use, a little further and more distinctly to unfold the Design that a Religious mind drives on in directing itself and all its actions to God. We are therefore to consider, that this doth not consist in some Transient thoughts of God and his Glory as the End we propound to ourselves in any Undertakings: a man does not direct all his actions to the Glory of God by forming a Conception in his Mind, or stirring up a strong Imagination upon any Action

Action, that That must be for the Glory of God: it is not the thinking of God's glory that is glorifying of him. As all other parts of Religion may be apishly acted over by Fancy and Imagination, so also may the Internal parts of Religion many times be acted over with much seeming grace by our Fancy and Passions; these often love to be drawing the pictures of Religion, and use their best arts to render them more beautiful and pleasing. But though true Practical Religion derives its force and beauty through all the Lower Powers of a man's Soul, yet it hath not its rise nor throne there: as Religion consists not in a Form of Words which signify nothing, so neither doth it consist in a Set of Fancies or Internal apprehensions. Our Saviour* hath best taught what it is to live to God's glory, or to glorify God, viz., to be fruitful in all holiness, and to live so as that our lives may shine with his grace spreading itself through our whole man.

We rather glorify God by entertaining

^{*} John xv. 8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.

the Impressions of his Glory upon us; than by communicating any kind of Glory to him. Then does a Good man become the Tabernacle of God wherein the Divine Shechinah does rest, and which the Divine glory fills, when the frame of his Mind and Life is wholly according to that Idea and Pattern which he receives from the Mount.* We best glorify him when we grow most like to him: and we then act most for his glory, when a true Spirit of Sanctity, Justice, Meekness, &c., runs through all our actions; when we so live in the World as becomes those that converse with the great Mind and Wisdom of the whole World, with that Almighty Spirit that made, supports and governs all things, with that Being from whence all good flows, and in which there is no Spot, Stain or Shadow of Evil; and so being captivated and overcome by the sense of the Divine loveliness and goodness, endeavour to be like him, and conform ourselves as much as may be to him.

When God seeks his own Glory, he does

^{*} As it is said of the Material Tabernacle, Exodus not so much endeavour anything without He did not bring this stately fabric of the Universe into Being, that he might for such a Monument of his mighty Power and Beneficence gain some Panegyrics or Applause from a little of that fading breath which he had made. Neither was that gracious contrivance of restoring lapsed men to himself a Plot to get himself some Eternal Hallelujahs, as if he had so ardently thirsted after the layes of glorified spirits, or desired a Choir of Souls to sing forth his Neither was it to let the World praises. see how Magnificent he was. No, it is his own Internal Glory that he most loves, and the Communication thereof which he seeks: it is an overflowing fountain, and that love which descends upon created Being is a free Efflux from the Almighty Source of love; and it is well pleasing to him that those Creatures which he hath made should partake of it. Though God cannot seek his own Glory so as if he might acquire any addition to himself, yet he may seek it so as to communicate it out of himself. Maxim stated by St. James (1.5), God giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, And by that Glory of his which he loves to impart to his Creatures, I understand those stamps and impressions of Wisdom, Justice, Patience, Mercy, Love, Peace, Joy, and other Divine gifts which he bestows freely upon the Minds of men. And thus God triumphs in his own Glory, and takes pleasure in the Communication of it.

As God's seeking his own Glory in respect of us, is most properly the flowing forth of his Goodness upon us; so our seeking the Glory of God is most properly our endeavouring a Participation of his Goodness and an earnest incessant pursuing after Divine perfection. When God becomes so great in our eyes, and all created things so little, that we reckon upon nothing as worthy of our aims or ambitions but a serious participation of the Divine Nature, and the Exercise of divine Virtues, Love, Joy, Peace, Long-suffering, Kindness, Goodness, and the like; -When the Soul beholding the Infinite beauty and loveliness of the Divinity, and then looking down and beholding all created Perfection mantled over with darkness, is ravished into love and admiration of that never-setting brightness, and endeavours after the greatest resemblance of God in Justice, Love, and Goodness; -When conversing with him by a secret feeling of the virtue, sweetness and power of his Goodness, we endeavour to assimilate ourselves to him: -Then we may be said to glorify him indeed. God seeks no glory but his own; and we have none of our own to give him. God in all things seeks himself and his own glory, as finding nothing Better than himself; and when we love him above all things, and endeavour to be most like him, we declare plainly that we count nothing Better than He is.

I doubt we are too nice Logicians sometimes in distinguishing between the Glory of God and our own Salvation. We cannot in a true sense seek our own Salvation more than the Glory of God, which triumphs most and discovers itself most effectually in the Salvation of Souls; for indeed this Salvation is nothing else but a true Participation of the Divine Nature. Heaven is not a thing without us, nor is Happiness anything anything distinct from a true Conjunction of the Mind with God in a secret feeling of his Goodness and reciprocation of affection to him, wherein the Divine Glory most unfolds itself. And there is nothing that a Soul touched with any serious sense of God can more earnestly thirst after or seek with more strength of affection than This. Then shall we be happy, when God comes to be all in all in us. To love God above ourselves is not indeed so properly to love him above the Salvation of our Souls, as if they were distinct things; but it is to love him above all our own sinful affections, and above our particular Beings, and to conform ourselves to him. And as that which is Good relatively, and in order to us, is so much the Better, by how much the more it is commensurate and conformed to us: So on the other side, that which is good absolutely and essentially, requires that our Minds and Affections should, as far as may be, be commensurate and conformed to it: and herein is God most glorified, and we made Happy. As we cannot truly love the First and Highest Good while we serve a design upon it, and subordinate it to ourselves: so neither is our own Salvation consistent with any such sordid, pinching, and particular love. We cannot be completely blessed, till the Ipsum Bonum, which is God, exercise its Sovereignty over all the Faculties of our Souls, rendering them as like to itself as may consist with their proper Capacity.

CHAPTER VI.

THE Fourth Property and Effect of True Religion wherein it expresseth its own Nobleness is this, That it begets the greatest Serenity, Constancy and Composedness of Mind, and brings the truest Contentment, the most satisfying Joy and Pleasure, the purest and most divine Sweetness and Pleasure to the Spirits of Good men. Every Good man, in whom Religion rules, is at peace and Unity with himself, is as a City compacted together. Grace doth more and more more reduce all the Faculties of the Soul into a perfect Subjection and Subordination to itself. The Union and Conjunction of the Soul with God, that Primitive Unity, is that which is the alone Original and Fountain of all Peace, and the Centre of Rest: as the further any Being slides from God, the more it breaks into discords within itself, as not having any Centre within itself which might collect and unite all the Faculties thereof to itself, and so knit them up together in a sweet confederacy amongst themselves. God only is such an Almighty Goodness as can attract all the Powers in man's Soul to itself, as being an Object transcendently adequate to the largest capacities of any created Being, and so unite man perfectly to himself in the true enjoyment of one Uniform and Simple Good.

It must be one Last End and Supreme Good that can fix Man's Mind, which otherwise will be tossed up down in perpetual uncertainties, and become as many several things as those poor Particularities are which it meets with. A wicked man's life is so distracted by a Multiplicity of Ends and Objects, that it never is nor can be consistent to itself, nor continue in any composed, settled frame: it is the most intricate, irregular and confused thing in the world, no one part of it agreeing with another, because the whole is not firmly knit together by the power of some One Last End running through all. Whereas the life of a Good man is under the sweet command of one Supreme Goodness and Last End. This alone is that living Form and Soul, which running through all the Powers of the Mind and Actions Life, collects all together into one fair and beautiful System, making all that Variety conspire into perfect Unity; whereas else all would fall asunder like the Members of a dead Body when once the Soul is gone, every little particle flitting each from other. A divided Mind and a Multiform Life speaks the greatest disparagement that may be: it is only the intermediation of One Last End that can reconcile a man perfectly to himself and his own happiness. This is the best temper temper and composedness of the Soul, when by a Conjunction with One Chief Good and Last End it is drawn up into an Unity and Consent with itself; when all the Faculties of the Soul with their several issues and motions, though never so many in themselves, like so many lines meet together in one and the same Centre. It is not one and the same Goodness that always acts the Faculties of a Wicked man: but as many several images and pictures of Goodness as a quick and working Fancy can represent to him; which so divide his affections, that he is no One thing within himself, but tossed hither and thither by the most independent Principles and Imaginations that may be. But a Good man hath singled out the Supreme Goodness, which by an Omnipotent sweetness draws all his affections after it, and so makes them all with the greatest complacency conspire together in the pursuit and embraces of it. Were there not some Infinite and Self-sufficient Goodness and that perfectly One, Man would be a most miserablydistracted creature. As the restless appetite tite within Man after some Infinite and Sovereign Good (without the enjoyment of which it could never be satisfied) does commend unto us the Notion of a Deity: so the perpetual distractions and divisions that would arise in the Soul upon a Plurality of Deities, may seem no less to evince the Unity of that Deity. Were not this Chief Good perfectly One, were there any other equal to it; man's Soul would hang equally poised, equally desiring the enjoyment of both, but moving to neither; like a piece of Iron between two Loadstones of equal virtue. But when Religion enters into the Soul, it charms all its restless rage and violent appetite, by discovering to it the Universal Fountain-fulness of One Supreme Almighty Goodness; and leading it out of itself into a conjunction therewith, it lulls it into the most undisturbed rest and quietness in the lap of Divine enjoyment; where it meets with full contentment, and rests adequately satisfied in the fruition of the Infinite, Uniform and Essential Goodness and Loveliness.

The Peace which a Religious Soul is possessed possessed of is such a Peace as passeth all Understanding: the Joy that it meets with in the ways of Holiness is unspeakable and full of Glory. The Delights and Sweetnesses that accompany a Religious life are of a purer and more excellent Nature than the Pleasures of Worldy men. The Spirit of a Good man is a more pure and refined thing than to delight itself in the thick mire of Earthly and Sensual pleasures, which Carnal men roll and tumble themselves in with so much greediness: speaks the degeneration of any Soul whatsoever, that it should desire to incorporate itself with any of the gross, dreggy, sensual delights here below. But a Soul purified by Religion from all Earthly dregs, delights to mingle itself only with things that are most Divine and Spiritual. is nothing that can beget any pleasure or sweetness but in some harmonical Faculty which hath some kindred and acquaintance with it. As it is in the Senses, so in every other Faculty there is such a Natural kind of Science as whereby it can single out its own proper Object from everything else else, and is better able to define it to itself than the exactest Artist in the world can; and when once it hath found it out, it presently feels itself so perfectly fitted and matched by it, that it disolves into secret joy and pleasure in the entertainment of it. True Delight and Joy is begotten by the conjunction of some discerning Faculty with its proper Object. The proper Objects for a Mind and Spirit are Divine and Immaterial things, with which it hath the greatest affinity, and therefore triumphs most in its converse with them; and when it converseth most with these high and noble Objects, it behaves itself most gracefully and lives most becoming itself; and it lives also most deliciously, nor can it anywhere else be better provided for or indeed fare so well. A Good man disdains to be beholding to the Wit or Art or Industry of any Creature to find him out and bring him in a constant revenue and maintenance for his Joy and Pleasure: the language of his Heart is that of the Psalmist, Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon me. Religion always carries a sufficient Provision of Joy and Sweetness along with it to maintain itself withal: All the ways of Wisdom are ways of pleasanness, and all her paths are peace. gion is no sullen Stoicism or oppressing Melancholy; it is no enthralling tyranny exercised over those noble and vivacious affections of Love and Delight, as those men that were never acquainted with the life of it may imagine; but it is full of a vigorous and masculine delight and joy, and such as advanceth and ennobles the Soul, and does not weaken or dispirit the life and power of it, as Sensual and Earthly joys do, when the Soul, unacquainted with Religion, is enforced to give entertainment to these gross and earthly things, for the want of enjoyment of some better The Spirit of a Good man may justly behave itself with a noble disdain to all Terrene pleasures, because it knows where to mend its fare; it is the fame Almighty and Eternal Goodness which is the Happiness of God and of all Good men. The truly-religious Soul affects nothing primarily and fundamentally but God himself;

self; his contentment even in the midst of his Worldly employments is in the Sun of the Divine favour that shines upon him; this is as the Manna that lies upon the top of all outward blessings which his Spirit gathers up and feeds upon with delight. Religion consists not in a toilsome drudgery about some Bodily exercises and External performances; nor is it only the spending of ourselves in such attendances upon God and services to him as are only accommodated to this life (though every employment for God is both amiable and honourable:) But there is something of our Religion that interests us in a present possession of that joy which is unspeakable and glorious; which leads us into the Porch of heaven, and to the confines of Eternity. It sometimes carries up the Soul into a mount of Transfiguration, or to the top of Pisgah, where it may take a prospect of the promised land; and gives it a Map or Scheme of its future inheritance: it gives it sometimes some anticipations of Blessedness, some foretastes of those joys, those rivers of pleasure which which run at God's right hand for ever more.

I might further add to this Argument, the Tranquillity and Composedness of a Good man's spirit in reference to all External molestations. Religion having made a thorough-pacification of the Soul within itself, renders it impregnable to all outward assaults: So that it is at rest and lives securely in the midst of all those boisterous Storms and Tempests that make such violent impressions upon the spirits of wicked men. Here the Stoics have stated the case aright, that all Perturbations of the Mind arise not properly from an Outward but an Inward cause: it is not any outward Evil but an inward imagination bred in the womb of the Soul itself, that molests and grieves it. The more that the Soul is restored to itself, and lives at the height of its own Being, the more easily may it disdain and despise any design or combination against it by the most blustering Giants in the world. A Christian that enjoys himself in God, will not be beholding to the world's fair and and gentle usage for the composedness of his mind;—No, he enjoys that Peace and Tranquillity within himself which no creature can bestow upon him, or take from him.

But the Stoics were not so happy in their notions about the way to true Rest and composedness of Spirit. It is not (by their leave) the Soul's collecting and gathering up itself within the Circumference of its own Essence, nor is it a rigid restraining and keeping in its own issues and motions within the confines of its own natural endowments, which is able to confer upon it that Composedness of mind which they so much idolize as the supreme and only bliss of man, and render it free from all kind of perturbations. Herein they missed of the true method of finding Rest to themselves, it being the Union of the Soul with God, that Uniform, Simple and unbounded Good, which is the sole Original of all true inward Peace. Neither were it a Happiness worth the having, for a Mind, like an Hermit sequestered from all things else, by a recession into itself, to spend an Eternity in self-converse and the enjoyment of such a Diminutive utive superficial Nothing as itself is and must necessarily be to itself. It is only peculiar to God to be happy in himself alone; and God who has been more liberal in his provisions for man, hath created in man such a spring of restless motion, that with the greatest impatiency forceth him out of himself, and violently tosseth him to and fro, till he come to fix himself upon some solid and Self-subsistent Goodness. Could a man find himself withdrawn from all terrene and Material things, and perfectly retired into himself; were the whole World so quiet and calm about him, as not to offer to make the least attempt upon the composedness and constancy of his Mind; might he be so well entertained at his own home, as to find no frowns, no sour looks from his own Conscience; might he have that security from Heaven, that God would not disguiet his fancied Tranquillity by embittering his thoughts with any dreadful apprehensions; yet he should find something within him that would not let him be at rest. but would rend him from himself, and toss him from

from his own foundation and consistency. There is an insatiable appetite in the Soul of man, like a greedy Lion hunting after his prey, that would render him impatient of his own pinching penury, and could never satisfy itself with such a thin and spare diet as he finds at home. There are Two principal faculties in the Soul which, like the two daughters of the Horseleech, are always crying, Give, Give: these are those hungry Vultures, which, if they cannot find their prey abroad, return and gnaw the Soul itself: where the carcase is, there will the Eagles be gathered together. By this we may see how unavailable to the attaining of true Rest and Peace that conceit of the Stoics was, who supposed the only way and method hereto was this, To confine the Soul thus Monastically to its own home. We read in the Gospel of such a Question of our Saviour's, What went you out into the wilderness to see? we may invert it, What do you return within, to see? A Soul confined within the private and narrow cell of its own particular Being? Such a Soul deprives itself of all that Almighty and Essential

Essential Glory and Goodness which shines round about it, which spreads itself through the whole universe; I say it deprives itself of all this, for the enjoying of such a poor petty and diminutive thing as itself is, which yet it can never enjoy truly in such a retiredness.

We have seen the Peaceful and Happy state of the truly-religious: But it is otherwise with wicked and irreligious men. There is no peace to the wicked; but they are like the troubled Sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt; as it is expressed by the Prophet Isaiah.* The mind of a wicked man is like the Sea when it roars and rages through the striving of several contrary winds upon it. Furious lusts and wild passions within, as they war against Heaven and the more noble and divine part of the Soul, so they war amongst themselves, maintaining perpetual contests, and contending which shall be the greatest: whence it is that the Soul of a wicked man becomes a very unhabitable and incommodious place to itself, full of disquietness and trouble through the many contests and civil commotions maintained within it. The minds of wicked men are like those disconsolate and desolate spirits which our Saviour speaks of, Matt. XII. which being cast out of their habitation, wander up and down through dry and desert places, seeking rest but finding none. The Soul that finds not some solid and selfsufficient Good to centre itself upon, is a boisterous and restless thing: and being without God, it wanders up and down the world, destitute, afflicted, tormented with vehement hunger and thirst after some satisfying Good: and as any one shall bring it tidings, Lo here or Lo there is Good, it presently goes out towards it, and with a swift and speedy flight hastens after it. The sense of an inward indigency doth stimulate and enforce it to seek its contentment without itself; and so it wanders up and down from one creature to another; and thus becomes distracted by a multiplicity of Objects. And while it cannot find some One and Only object upon which, as being perfectly adequate to its capacities, it may wholly bestow itself; while it is tossed with restless and and vehement motions of Desire and Love through a world of painted beauties, false glossing Excellencies; courting all, but matching nowhere; while it converseth only with these pinching Particularities here below, and is not yet acquainted with the Universal Goodness; it is certainly far from true Rest and Satisfaction, from a fixed, composed temper of spirit: but being distracted by multiplicity of Objects and Ends, there can never be any firm and stable peace or friendship at home amongst all its Powers and Faculties: nor can there be a firm amity and friendship abroad betwixt wicked men themselves, because all Vice is so Multiform and inconsistent a thing, and so there can be no true concatenation of Affections and Ends between them. Whereas in all Good men Virtue and Goodness is one Form and Soul to them all, that unites them together, and there is the One, Simple and Uniform Good, that guides and governs them all. They are not as a Ship tossed in the tumultuous Ocean of this world without any Compass at all to steer by; but they direct their course by the certain guidance of the One Last End, as the true Pole-star of all their motion. But while the Soul lies benighted in a thick Ignorance (as it is with wicked men), and beholds not some Stable and Eternal Good to move toward; though it may, by the strength of that Principle of Activeness within itself, spend itself perpetually with swift and giddy motions; yet it will be always contesting with secret disturbances, and cannot act but with many reluctances, as not finding an object equal to the force and strength of its vast affections to act upon.

By what hath been said may appear the vast difference between the ways of Sin and of Holiness. Inward distractions and disturbances, tribulation and anguish upon every Soul that doth evil: But to every man that worketh good, glory, honour and peace, inward composedness and tranquillity of spirit, pure and divine joys far excelling all sensual pleasures; in a word, true Contentment of spirit and full satisfaction in God, whom the pious Soul loves above all things, and longs still after a nearer enjoyment of him. The life of holy and divine divine men is a life not touched with these vanishing delights of Time, but a flight of the Soul alone to God alone.

CHAPTER VII.

THE Fifth Property or Effect whereby True Religion discovers its own Nobleness and Excellency is this, That it advanceth the Soul to an holy boldness and humble familiarity with God, as also to a well-grounded Hope and comfortable Confidence concerning the Love of God toward it, and its own Salvation. The truly religious Soul maintains an humble and sweet familiarity with God; and with great alacrity of spirit, without any Consternation and Servility of spirit, is enabled to look upon the Glory and Majesty of the most High: But Sin and Wickedness is pregnant with fearful-That Trembling and ness and horror. Consternation of Mind which possesses wicked men, is nothing else but a brat of darkness, begotten in corrupt and irreligious F 2 Hearts.

Hearts. While men walk in darkness, and are of the night (as the Apostle speaks), then it is only that they are vexed with those ugly and ghastly Mormos that terrify and torment them. But when once the Day breaks, and true Religion opens herself upon the Soul like the Eyelids of the Morning, then all those shadows and frightful Apparitions flee away. As all Light and Love and Joy descend from above from the Father of lights: so all Darkness and Fearfulness and Despair are from below; they arise from corrupt and earthly minds, and are like those gross Vapours arising from this Earthly globe, that not being able to get up towards heaven, spread themselves about the circumference of that Body where they were first begotten, infesting it with darkness and generating into Thunder and Lightning, Clouds and Tempests. But the higher a Christian ascends above this dark dungeon of the Body, the more that Religion prevails within him, the more then shall he find himself as it were in a clear heaven, in a Region that is calm and Serene; and the more more will those black and dark affections of Fear and Despair vanish away, and those clear and bright affections of Love and Joy and Hope break forth in their strength and lustre.

The Devil. who is the Prince of darkness and the great Tyrant, delights to be served with ghastly affections and the most dismal deportments of trembling and astonishment; as having nothing at all of amiableness or excellency in him to commend himself to his worshippers. Slavery and servility is the badge and livery of the Devil's religion. But God, who is the supreme Goodness and Essential both Love and Loveliness, takes most pleasure in those sweet and delightful affections of the Soul, viz., Love, Joy, and Hope, which are most correspondent to his The ancient superstition of own nature. the Heathens was always very nice and curious in honouring every one of their Gods with Sacrifices and Rites most agreeable to their natures: I am sure there is no Incense, no offering we can present God with, is so sweet, so acceptable to him as our Love and Delight and Confidence in him; and when he comes into the Souls of men, he makes these his Throne, his place of rest, as finding the greatest agreeableness therein to his own Essence. Good man that finds himself made partaker of the Divine nature, and transformed into the image of God, infinitely takes pleasure in God, as being altogether Lovely, according to that in $\bar{C}ant.$ 5; and his Meditation of God is sweet unto him. Ps. 104. John that lay in the bosom of Christ who came from the bosom of the Father, and perfectly understood his Eternal Essence, hath given us the fullest description that he could make of him, when he tells us that God is Love, and he that dwells in God, dwells in love; and reposing himself in the bosom of an Almighty Goodness, where he finds nothing but Love and Loveliness, he now displays all the strength and beauty of those his choicest and most precious affections of Love and Joy and Confidence; his Soul is now at ease, and rests in peace, neither is there anything to make afraid: He is got beyond all those powers of darkness which give such continual tinual alarms in this lower world, and are always troubling the Earth: He is got above all fears and despairs; he is in a bright clear region, above Clouds and Tempests. There is no frightful terribleness in the supreme Majesty. That men apprehend God at any time in such a dismayed manner, it must not at all be made an argument of his nature, but of our sinfulness and weakness. The Sun in the heavens always was and will be a Globe of Light and brightness, howsoever a purblind Eye is rather dazzled than enlightened by it. There is an Inward sense in Man's Soul, which, were it awakened and excited with an inward taste and relish of the Divinity, could better define God to him than all the world else. It is the sincere Christian that so tastes and sees how good and sweet the Lord is, as none else does: The God of hope fills him with all joy and peace in believing, so that he abounds in hope, as the Apostle speaks Rom. 15. He quietly reposes himself in God; his heart is fixed, trusting in the Lord; he is more for a solid peace and settled settled calm of spirit, than for high Raptures and feelings of Joy or Extraordinary Manifestations of God to him: he does not passionately desire nor importunately expect such things; he rather looks after the Manifestations of the Goodness and Power of God within him, in subduing all in his Soul that is unlike and contrary to God, and forming him into his image and likeness.

Though I think it worthy of a Christian to endeavour the Assurance of his own Salvation; yet perhaps it might be the safest way to moderate his curiosity of prying into God's Book of life, and to stay a while until he sees himself within the confines of Salvation itself. Should a man hear a Voice from Heaven or see a Vision from the Almighty, to testify unto him the Love of God towards him; yet methinks it were more desirable to find a Revelation of all from within, a rising up from the Bottom and Centre of a man's own Soul. in the Real and Internal impressions of a Godlike nature upon his own spirit; and thus to find the Foundation and Beginning of Heaven and Happiness within himself: it were more desirable to see the crucifying of our own Will, the mortifying of the mere Animal life, and to see a Divine life rising up in the room of it, as a sure Pledge and Inchoation of Immortality and Happiness, the very Essence of which consists in a perfect conformity and cheerful compliance of all the Powers of our Souls with the Will of God.

The best way of gaining a well-grounded assurance of the Divine love is this, for a man to overcome himself and his own Will: To him that overcomes shall be given that white stone, and in it the new name written, which no man knoweth but he that receives it. He that beholds the Sun of righteousness arising upon the Horizon of his Soul with healing in its wings, and chasing away all that misty darkness of his own Self-will and Passions; such a one desires not now the Star-light to know whether it be Day or not, nor cares he to pry into Heaven's secrets, and to search into the hidden rolls of Eternity, there to see the whole plot of his Salvation; for he views it transacted upon upon the inward stage of his own Soul, and reflecting upon himself he may behold a Heaven opened from within, and a Throne set up in his Soul, and an Almighty Saviour sitting upon it, and reigning within him: he now finds the Kingdom of Heaven within him, and sees that it is not a thing merely reserved for him without him, being already made partaker of the sweetness and efficacy of it. What the Jews say of the Spirit of Prophecy, may not unfitly be applied to the Holy Ghost, the true Comforter dwelling in the minds of good men as a sure Earnest of their Eternal inheritance. The Spirit resides not but upon a man of Fortitude, one that gives proof of this Fortitude in subduing his own Self-will and his Affections. We read of Elisha, that he was fain to call for a Musical instrument and one to play before him, to allay the heat of his Passions, before he could converse with the Prophetical The Holy Spirit is too pure and gentle a thing to dwell in a Mind muddied and disturbed by those impure dregs, those thick fogs and mists that arise from our Self-will and Passions; our prevailing over these

these is the best way to cherish the Holy Spirit, by which we may be sealed unto the day of redemption.

To conclude this Particular: It is a venturous and rugged guess and conceit which some men have, That in a perfect resignation of our Wills to the Divine will a man should be content with his own Damnation, and to be the Subject of Eternal Wrath in Hell, if it should so please God. Which is as impossible as it is for him that infinitely thirsts after a true Participation of the Divine Nature, and most earnestly endeayours a most inward Union with God in Spirit, by a denial of himself and his own will, to swell up in Self-love, Pride and Arrogancy against God; the one whereof is the most substantial Heaven, the other the most real Hell: whereas indeed by conquering ourselves we are translated from Death to Life, and the kingdom of God and Heaven is already come into us.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE Sixth Property or Effect wherein Religion discovers its own Excellency is this, That it Spiritualizes Material things, and so carries up the Souls of Good men from Earthly things to things Divine, from this Sensible World to the Intellectual.

God made the Universe and all the Creatures contained therein as so many Glasses wherein he might reflect his own Glory: He hath copied forth himself in the Creation; and in this Outward World we may read the lovely characters of the Divine Goodness, Power and Wisdom. In some Creatures there are darker representations of God, there are the Prints and Footsteps of God: but in others there are clearer and fuller representations of the Divinity, the Face and Image of God. But how to find God here and feelingly to converse with him, and being affected with the sense of the Divine Glory shining out upon the Creation, how to pass out of the Sensible World into the Intellectual, is not so effectually taught by that Philosophy which professed professed it most, as by true Religion: that which knits and unites God and the Soul together, can best teach it how to ascend and descend upon those golden links that unite as it were the World to God. Divine Wisdom that contrived and beautified this glorious Structure, can best explain her own Art, and carry up the Soul back again in these reflected Beams to him who is the Fountain of them. Though Good men, all of them, are not acquainted with all those Philosophical notions touching the relation between Created and the Uncreated Being; yet may they easily find every Creature pointing out to that Being whose image and superscription it bears, and climb up from those darker resemblances of the Divine Wisdom and Goodness shining out in different degrees upon several Creatures, till they sweetly repose themselves in the bosom of the Divinity: and while they are thus conversing with this lower World, and are viewing the invisible things of God in the things that are made, in this visible and outward Creation, they find God many times secretly flowing into into their Souls, and leading them silently out of the Court of the Temple into the Holy Place. But it is otherwise with Wicked men; they dwell perpetually upon the dark side of the Creatures, and converse with these things only in a gross, sensual, earthly and unspiritual manner; they are so encompassed with the thick and foggy mists of their own Corruptions, that they cannot see God there where he is most visible: the Light shineth in darkness, but darkness comprehends it not: their Souls are so deeply sunk into that House of Clay which they carry about with them, that were there nothing of Body or bulky Matter before them, they could find nothing to exercise themselves about.

But Religion, where it is in truth and in power, renews the very Spirit of our Minds, and doth in a manner Spiritualize this outward Creation to us, in purging Bodily and Material things from the feculency and dregs of Matter, and separating them from those circumstantiating and straightening conditions of Time and Place, and the like; and teaches the Soul to look at those Per-

fections which it finds here below, not so much as the Perfections of This or That Body, as they adorn This or That particular Being, but as they are so many Rays issuing forth from that First and Essential Perfection, in which they all meet and embrace one another in the most close friendship. Every Particular Good is a Blossom of the First Goodness; every created Excellency is a Beam descending from the Father of lights: and should we separate all these Particularities from God, all affection spent upon them would be unchaste, and their embraces adulterous. We should love all things in God, and God in all things, because he is All in all, the Beginning and Original of Being, the perfect Idea of their Goodness, and the End of their Motion. It is nothing but a thick mist of Pride and Self-love that hinders men's eyes from beholding that Sun which both enlightens them and all things else: But when true Religion begins once to dawn upon men's Souls, and with its shining light chases away their black Night of Ignorance; then they behold themselves and

and all things else enlightened (though in a different way) by one and the same Sun, and all the Powers of their Souls fall down before God and ascribe all glory to him. Now it is that a Good man is no more solicitous whether This or That good thing be Mine, or whether My perfections exceed the measure of This or That particular Creature; for whatsoever Good he beholds anywhere, he enjoys and delights in it as much as if it were his own, and whatever he beholds in himself, he looks not upon it as his Property but as a Common good; for all these Beams come from one and the same Fountain and Ocean of light in whom he loves them all with an Universal love: when his affections run along the stream of any created excellences, whether his own or any one's else, yet they stay not here, but run on till they fall into the Ocean; they do not settle into a fond love and admiration either of himself or any other's Excellences, but he owns them as so many Pure Effluxes and Emanations from God, and in a Particular Being loves the Universal Goodness.

Thus

Thus may a Good man walk up and down the World as in a Garden of Spices, and suck a Divine Sweetness out of every There is a Twofold meaning in every Creature, as the Jews speak of the Law, a Literal and a Mystical, and the one is but the ground of the other: so a Good man says of everything that his Senses offer to him, it speaks to his lower part, but it points out something above to his Mind and Spirit. It is the drowsy and muddy spirit of Superstition which, being lulled asleep in the lap of worldly delights, is fain to set some Idol at its elbow, something that may jog it and put it in mind of God. Whereas true Religion never finds itself out of the Infinite sphere of the Divinity, and wherever it finds Beauty, Harmony, Goodness, Love, Ingenuousness, Wisdom, Holiness, Justice, and the like, it is ready to say, Here, and There is God: wheresoever any such Perfections shine out, an holy Mind climbs up by these Sunbeams, and raises up itself to God.

And seeing God hath never thrown the World from himself, but runs through all created Essence, containing the Archetypal Ideas of all things in himself, and from thence deriving and imparting several prints of Beauty and Excellency all the world over: a Soul that is truly God-like, a Mind that is enlightened from the same Fountain, and hath its inward Senses affected with the sweet relishes of Divine Goodness, cannot but everywhere behold itself in the midst of that Glorious Unbounded Being who is indivisibly everywhere. A Good man finds every place he treads upon Holy ground; to him the World is God's Temple; he is ready to say with Jacob, Gen. 28. How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the House of God.

To conclude, It was a degenerous and unworthy Spirit in that Philosophy which first separated and made such distances between Metaphysical Truths and the Truths of Nature; whereas the first and most ancient Wisdom amongst the Heathens was indeed a Philosophical Divinity, or a Divine Philosophy; which continued for divers ages, but as men grew worse, their queazy stomachs began to loathe it: which made the truly-wise Socrates complain of the Sophisters of that Age which began now to corrupt and debase it; whereas heretofore the Spirit of Philosophy was more generous and divine, and did more purify and ennoble the Souls of men, commending Intellectual things to them, and taking them off from settling upon Sensible and Material things here below, and still exciting them to endeavour after the nearest resemblance of God the Supreme Goodness and Loveliness, and an intimate Conjunction with him; which, according to the strain of that Philosophy, was the true Happiness of Immortal Souls.

CHAPTER IX.

THE Seventh and last Property or Effect wherein True Religion expresseth its own Nobleness and Excellency, is this, That it raiseth the Minds of Good men to a due observance of and attendance upon Divine Providence, and enables them to serve the G2 Will

Will of God, and to acquiesce in it. Wheresoever God hath a Tongue to speak, there they have Ears to hear; and being attentive to God in the soft and still motions of Providence, they are ready to obey his call, and to say with Esaias, Behold, here am I, send me. They endeavour to copy forth that Lesson which Christ hath set Christians, seriously considering how that they came into this world by God's appointment, not to do their own Wills but the Will of him that sent them.

As this Consideration quiets the Spirit of a Good man who is no idle Spectator of Providence, and keeps him in a calm and sober temper in the midst of all Storms and Tempests; so it makes him most freely to engage himself in the service of Providence, without any inward reluctancy or disturbance. He cannot be content that Providence should serve itself of him as it doth even of those things that understand it least; but it is his holy ambition to serve it. It is nothing else but Hellish pride and Self-love that makes men serve themselves, and to set up themselves as Idols against God:

But

But it is indeed an argument of true Nobleness of Spirit for a man to view himself (not in the narrow Point of his own Being, but) in the Unbounded Essence of the First Cause, so as to live only as an Instrument in the hands of God who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will.

To a Good man to serve the Will of God, it is in the truest and best sense to serve himself, who knows himself to be nothing without or in opposition to God. This is the most divine life that can be, for a man to act in the world upon Eternal designs, and to be so wholly devoted to the Will of God, as to serve it most faithfully and entirely. This indeed bestows a kind of Immortality upon these flitting and Transient acts of ours, which in themselves are but the Offspring of a moment. A Pillar or Verse is a poor sorry Monument of any Exploit, which yet may well enough become the highest of the world's bravery. But Good men, while they work with God and endeavour to bring themselves and all their actions to a unity with God, his Ends and Designs, enroll themselves in Eternity. This is the proper Character

Character of holy Souls; Their Wills are so fully resolved into the Divine Will, that they in all things subscribe to it without any murmurings or debates: they rest well satisfied with, and take complacency in, any passages of Divine dispensation, as being ordered and disposed by a Mind and Wisdom above according to the highest rules of Goodness.

The best way for a man rightly to enjoy himself, is to maintain an universal, ready and cheerful compliance with the Divine and Uncreated Will in all things; as knowing that nothing can issue and flow forth from the fountain of Goodness but that which is good: and therefore a Good man is never offended with any piece of Divine dispensation, nor hath he any reluctance against that Will that dictates and determines all things by an Eternal rule of Goodness; as knowing, That there is an unbounded and Almighty Love, that without any disdain or envy freely communicates itself to every thing he made; that feeds even the young Ravens that call upon him; that makes his Sun to shine, and his Rain to fall, both upon the just and unjust; that always enfolds those in his everlasting arms who are made partakers of his own Image, perpetually nourishing and cherishing them with the fresh and vital influences of his Grace; as knowing also, That there is an All-seeing Eye, an unbounded Mind and Understanding, that derives itself through the whole Universe, and fitting in all the wheels of motion, guides them all and powerfully governs the most eccentrical motions of Creatures, and carries them all most harmoniously in their several orbs to one Last End. Who then shall give Law to God? Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? Where is he that would climb up into that great Consistory in heaven, and sitting in consultation with the Almighty, instruct the Infinite and Incomprehensible Wisdom? Shall vain man be wiser than his maker? This is the hellish temper of wicked men, they examine and judge of all things by the line and measure of their own Self-will, their own Opinions and Designs; and measuring all things by a crooked rule, they think nothing to be straight: straight; and therefore they fall out with God, and with restless impatience fret and vex themselves: and this fretfulness and impatience in wicked men argues a breach in the just and due constitution of their Minds and Spirits.

But a Good man, whose Soul is restored to that frame and constitution it should be in, has better apprehensions of the ways and works of God, and is better affected under the various disposals of Providence. Indeed to a superficial observer of Divine Providence many things there are that seem to be nothing else but Digressions from the main End of all, and to come to pass by a fortuitous concourse of Circumstances; that come in so abruptly and without any concatenation or dependance one upon another, as if they were without any Mind or Understanding to guide them. But a wise man that looks from the Beginning to the End of things, beholds them all in their due place and method acting that part which the Supreme Mind and Wisdom that governs all things hath appointed them, and to carry on one and

and the same Eternal design, while they move according to their own proper inclinations and measures, and aim at their own particular Ends. It were not worth the while to live in the world devoid of God and Providence: And to be subservient unto Providence is the holy ambition and great endeavour of a Good man, who is so perfectly overpowered with the love of the Universal and Infinite Goodness, that he would not serve any Particular Good whatsoever, no not himself, so as to set up in the world and trade for himself, as the men of this world do who are lovers of their ownselves, and lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.

CHAPTER X.

We have considered the Excellency of True Religion, 1. in regard of its Descent and Origin; 2. in regard of its Nature; 3. in regard of its Properties and Effects. We proceed now to a Fourth Particular and shall show

That Religion is a generous and noble thing in regard of its Progress; it is perpetually perpetually carrying on that Mind in which it is once seated toward Perfection. Though the First appearance of it upon the Souls of good men may be but as the Wings of the Morning spreading themselves upon the Mountains, yet it is still rising higher and higher upon them, chasing away all the filthy mists and vapours of Sin and Wickedness before it, till it arrives to its Meridian altitude.* There is the strength and force of the Divinity in it; and though when it first enters into the Minds of men, it may seem to be sown in weakness, yet it will raise itself in power. As Christ was in his Bodily appearance, he was still increasing in wisdom and knowledge and favour with God and man, until he was perfected in glory: so is he also in his Spiritual appearance in the Souls of men; and accordingly the New Testament does more than once distinguish of Christ in his several ages and degrees of growth in the Souls of all true Chris-Good men are always walking on

from

^{*} Prov. 4, 18. The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

from strength to strength, till at last they see God in Zion. Religion, though it hath its infancy, yet it hath no old age: while it is in its Minority, it is always in motion; but when it comes to its Maturity and full age, it will always be in repose, it is then always the same, and its years fail not, but it shall endure for ever. Holy and religious Souls being once touched with an inward sense of Divine Beauty and Goodness, by a strong impress upon them are moved swiftly after God (and, as the Apostle expresses himself) forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, they press toward the Mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; that so they may attain to the resurrection of the dead.

Where a Spirit of Religion is, there is the Central force of Heaven itself quickening and enlivening those that are informed by it in their motions toward Heaven. As on the other side all unhallowed and defiled minds are within the attractive power of Hell, and are continually hastening their course thither, being strongly pressed down down by the weight of their Wickedness. Every nature in this world hath some proper Centre which it is always hastening Sin and Wickedness do not hover a little over the bottomless pit of Hell, and only flutter about it; but it is continually sinking lower and lower into it. Neither does true Grace make some feeble assays towards Heaven, but by a mighty Energy within itself it is always soaring up higher and higher into heaven. A good Christian does not only court his Happiness, and cast now and then a smile upon it, or satisfy himself merely to be attracted to it; but with the greatest ardours of Love and Desire he pursues the solemnity of the just Nuptials, that he may be wedded to it and made one with it. It is not an airy speculation of Heaven as a thing (though never so undoubtedly) to come, that can satisfy his hungry desires, but the real * possession of it even in this life. Happiness would be less in the esteem of Good men, that were only good to be enjoyed at the end of this life when all other enjoyments fail him.

I wish there be not among some such a light and poor esteem of Heaven, as makes them more to seek after assurance of Hea. ven, only in the Idea of it as a thing to come, than after Heaven itself; which indeed we can never well be assured of, until we find it rising up within ourselves and glorifying our own Souls. When true Assurance comes, Heaven itself will appear upon the Horizon of our Souls, like a morning light chasing away all our dark and gloomy doubtings before it. We shall not need then to light up our Candles to seek for it in corners; no, it will display its own lustre and brightness so before us, that we may see it in its own light, and ourselves the true possessors of it. We may be too nice and vain in seeking for signs and tokens of Christ's Spiritual appearances in the Souls of men, as well as the Scribes and Pharisees were in seeking for them at his First appearance in the World. When he comes into us, let us expect till the works that he shall do within us may testify of him; and be not over-credulous, till we find that he does those works there which none other could do. for a true well-grounded Assurance, say not so much, Who shall ascend up into heaven, to fetch it down from thence? or who shall descend into the deep, to fetch it up from beneath? for in the Growth of true internal Goodness and in the Progress of true Religion it will freely unfold itself within Stay till the grain of Mustard-seed itself breaks forth from among the clods that buried it, till through the descent of the heavenly dew it sprouts up and discovers itself openly. This holy Assurance is indeed the budding and blossoming of Felicity in our own Souls; it is the inward sense and feeling of the true life, spirit, sweetness and beauty of Grace powerfully expressing its own Energy within us.

Briefly, True Religion in the Progress of it transforms those Minds in which it reigns from glory to glory: it goes on and prospers in bringing all enemies in subjection under their feet, in reconciling the Minds of men fully to God; and it instates them in a firm possession of the Supreme Good.

Good. This is the Seed of God within holy Souls, which is always warring against the Seed of the Serpent, till it prevails over it through the Divine strength and influence. Though Hell may open her mouth wide and without measure, yet a true Christian in whom the seed of God remaineth, is in a good and safe condition; he finds himself borne up by an Almighty arm, and carried upwards as upon Eagles' wings; and the Evil one hath no power over him, or, as S. John expresses it, the Evil one toucheth him not, 1 Ep. chap. 5. v. 18.

CHAPTER XI.

WE come now to the Fifth and Last Particular, viz., The Excellency of Religion in the Term and End of it, which is nothing else but Blessedness itself in its full maturity. Which yet I may not here undertake to explain, nor can it descend so low as to accommodate itself to any human style. Accordingly S. John tells us, it does not yet appear what we shall be; and yet that he may give us some glimpse of it, he points us out to God, and tells us, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he Indeed the best way to get a discovery of it, is to endeavour as much as may be to be Godlike, to live in a feeling converse with God and in a powerful exercise and expression of all Godlike dispositions: So shall our inner man be best enabled to know the breadth and length, the depth and height of that Love and Goodness which yet passeth all knowledge. There is a State of Perfection in the life to come so far transcendent to any in this life, as that we are not able from hence to take the just proportions of it, or to form a full and comprehensive notion of it. We are unable to comprehend the vastness and fulness of that Happiness which the most purified Souls may be raised to, or to apprehend how far the mighty power and strength of the Divinity deriving itself into created Being, may communicate a more Transcendent life and blessedness to it. We know not what latent powers our Souls may here contain within themselves, which then may begin to open and dilate themselves selves to let in the full streams of the Divine Goodness when they come nearly and intimately to converse with it; or how Blessedness may act upon those Faculties of our Minds which we now have. We know not what illapses and irradiations there may be from God upon Souls in Glory, that may raise them into a state of Perfection surpassing all our imaginations.

As for Corporeal Happiness, there cannot be anything further added to the Pleasure of our Bodies or Animal part, than a restoring it from disturbing Passion and Pain to its just and natural constitution; and therefore some Philosophers have well disputed against the opinion of the Epicureans that make Happiness to consist in Bodily pleasure, and when the molestation is gone, and the just constitution of Nature recovered. Pleasure ceaseth. But the highest Pleasure of Minds and Spirits does not only consist in the relieving of them from any antecedent pains or grief, or in a relaxation from some former molesting Passion: as the Happiness of the Deity is not a mere Negative thing, rendering it free from all disturbance or molestation, so that it may eternally rest quiet within itself: a Mind and Spiritis too full of activity and energy, is too quick and potent a thing to enjoy a full and complete Happiness in a mere Cessation; this were to make Happiness an heavy Spiritless thing. There is infinite power and strength in Divine joy; pleasure and happiness commensurate to that Almighty Being and Goodness which is the Eternal source of it.

As Created Beings, that are capable of conversing with God, stand nearer to God, or farther off from him; and as they partake more or less of his likeness, so they partake more or less of that Happiness which flows forth from him, and God communicates himself in different degrees to them. There may be as many degrees of Sanctity and Perfection, as there are of States and Conditions of Creatures: and that is properly Sanctity which guides and orders all the Faculties and Actions of any Creature in a way suitable and correspondent to that rank and state which God hath hath placed it in: and while it doth so, it admits no sin or defilement to itself, though yet it may be elevated and advanced higher; and accordingly true Positive Sanctity comes to be advanced higher and higher, as any Creature comes more to partake of the life of God, and to be brought into a nearer conjunction with God: and so the Sanctity and Happiness of Innocency itself might have been perfected.

Thus we see how True Religion carries up the Souls of Good men above the black regions of Hell and Death. This indeed is Religion itself, or a real participation of God and his Holiness, which is their true restitution and advancement. All that Happiness which Good men shall be made partakers of, as it cannot be borne up upon any other foundation than true Goodness and a Godlike nature within them; so neither is it distinct from it. Sin and Hell are so twined and twisted up together, that if the power of Sin be once dissolved, the bonds of Death and Hell will also fall asunder. Sin and Hell are of the same kind, of the same lineage and descent: as on the other side True Holiness or Religion and True Happiness are but two several notions of one thing, rather than distinct in themselves. Religion delivers us from Hell by instating us in a possession of True Life and Bliss. Hell is rather a Nature than a Place: and Heaven cannot be so truly defined by anything without us, as by something that is within us.

Thus have we done with those Particulars wherein we considered the Excellency and Nobleness of Religion, which is here expressed by The way of life, and elsewhere is styled by Solomon, A tree of life: true Religion being an inward Principle of life, of a Divine life, the best life, that which is Life most properly so called: accordingly in the Holy Scripture a life of Religion is styled Life, as a life of Sin and Wickedness is styled Death. In the ancient Academical Philosophy it was much disputed whether that Corporeal and Animal life, which was always drawing down the Soul into Terrene and Material things, was not more properly to be Styled Death than Life. What sense hereof the Pythagoreans had may appear by this practice of theirs, They were wont to set up Empty coffins in the places of those that had forsaken their School and degenerated from their Philosophy and good Precepts, as being Apostates from life itself, and dead to Virtue and a good life, which is the true life, and therefore fit only to be reckoned among the dead.

For a Conclusion of this Discourse; The Use which we shall make of all shall be this, To awaken and exhort every one to a serious minding of Religion: as Solomon doth earnestly exhort every one to seek after true Wisdom, which is the same with Religion and Holiness, as Sin is with Folly: Prov. 4, 5. Get Wisdom, get understanding; and v. 7. Get Wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding. Wisdom is the principal thing. This is the sum of all, the Conclusion of the whole matter, Fear God, and keep his Commandments; for this is the whole (duty, business and concernment) of man. Let us not trifle away our time and opportunities which God hath given us, wherein we may lay hold upon upon Life and Immortality, in doing nothing, or else pursuing Hell and Death. Let us awake out of our vain dreams: Wisdom calls upon us, and offers us the hidden treasures of Life and Blessedness. Let us not perpetually deliver over ourselves to laziness and slumbering. Say not, There is a lion in the way; say not, Though Religion be good, yet it is unattainable: No, but let us intend all our Powers in a serious resolved pursuance of it, and depend upon the assistance of Heaven which never fails those that soberly seek for it. It is indeed the Levity of men's spirits, their heedlessness and regardlessness of their own lives, that betrays them to Sin and Death. They ordinarily ponderate and deliberate upon every thing more than how it becomes them to live: they so live as if their Bodies had swallowed up their Souls: their lives are but a kind of Lottery; the Principles by which they are guided are nothing else but a confused multitude of Fancies rudely jumbled together. Such is the life of most men, it is but a mere Casual thing acted over at peradventure, without any fair and calm debates held either with Religion, or with Reason which in itself, as it is not distorted and depraved by corrupt men, is a true Friend to Religion, and directs men to God and to things good and just, pure, lovely and praiseworthy; and the directions of this Inward guide we are not to neglect. Unreasonableness or the smothering and extinguishing the Candle of the Lord within us is no piece of Religion, nor advantageous to it: That certainly will not raise men up to God, which sinks them There had never been such below men. an Apostasy from Religion, nor had such a Mystery of iniquity (full of deceiveableness and imposture) been revealed and wrought so powerfully in the Souls of some men, had there not first come an Apostasy from sober Reason, had there not first been a falling away and departure from Natural Truth.

It is to be feared our nice speculations in Theology have tended more to exercise men's Wits than to reform their lives, and that they have too much descended into their practice, and have tended rather to take men off from minding Religion, than to quicken them up to a diligent seeking after it. Though the Powers of Nature may now be weakened, and though we cannot produce a living form of Religion in our own Souls; yet we are not surely resolved so into a sluggish Passiveness, as that we cannot, or were not in any kind or manner of way to seek after it. Certainly a man may as well read the Scriptures as study a piece of Aristotle, or of Natural Philosophy or Mathematics. He that can observe anything comely and commendable, or unworthy and base, in another man, may also reflect upon himself, and see how face answers to face, as Solomon speaks, Proverbs 27, 19. If men would seriously commune with their hearts, their own Consciences would tell them plainly, that they might avoid and omit more evil than they do, and that they might do more good than they do: and that they do not put forth that power which God hath given them, nor faithfully use those Talents nor improve the advantages and means afforded them.

I fear the ground of most men's Misery will will prove to be a Second fall, and a Lapse upon a Lapse. I doubt God will not allow that Proverb, The Fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge, as not in respect of Temporal misery, much less will he allow it in respect of Eternal. It will not be so much because our First parents incurred God's displeasure, as because we have neglected what might have been done by us afterwards in order to the seeking of God, his face and favour, while he might be found.

Up then and be doing; and the Lord will be with us. He will not leave us nor forsake us, if we seriously set ourselves about the work. Let us endeavour to acquaint ourselves with our own lives, and the true Rules of life, with this which Solomon here calls the Way of Life: let us inform our Minds as much as may be in the Excellency and Loveliness of Practical Religion; that beholding it in its own beauty and amiableness, we may the more sincerely close with it. As there would need nothing else to deter and affright men from Sin but its own ugliness and deformity, were it presented to a naked view and seen as it is; so nothing would more effectually commend Religion to the Minds of men, than the displaying and unfolding the Excellencies of its Nature, than the true Native beauty and inward lustre of Religion itself: neither the Evening nor the Morning Star could so sensibly commend themselves to our bodily Eyes, and delight them with their shining beauties, as True Religion, which is an undefiled Beam of the uncreated light, would to a mind capable of conversing with it. Religion, which is the true Wisdom, is (as the Author of the Book of Wisdom speaks of Wisdom,) a pure influence flowing from the glory of the Almighty, the brightness of the Everlasting light, the unspotted mirror of the power of God, and the image of his Goodness: She is more beautiful than the Sun, and above all the order of Stars; being compared with the light, she is found before it. (Chapter 7.)

Religion is no such austere, sour and rigid thing as to affright men away from it: No, but those that are acquainted with the power of it, find it to be altogether sweet and amiable. An holy Soul sees so much of the glory of Religion in the lively impression, which it bears upon itself, as both wooes and wins it. We may truly say concerning Religion to such Souls as S. Paul spake to the Corinthians, Needs it any Epistles of Commendation to you? Needs it anything to court your affections? Ye are indeed its Epistle, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God.

Religion is not like the Prophet's roll, sweet as honey when it was in his mouth, but as bitter as gall in his belly. Religion is no sullen Stoicism, no sour Pharisaism; it does not consist in a few Melancholy passions, in some dejected looks or depressions of Mind: but it consists in Freedom, Love, Peace, Life and Power; the more it comes to be digested into our lives, the more sweet and lovely we shall find it to be. Those spots and wrinkles which corrupt Minds think they see in the face of Religion, are indeed no where else but in their own deformed and misshapen apprehensions.

apprehensions. It is no wonder when a defiled Fancy comes to be the Glass, if you have an unlovely reflection. Let us therefore labour to purge our own Souls from all worldly pollutions; let us breathe after the aid and assistance of the Divine Spirit, that it may irradiate and enlighten our Minds, that we may be able to see Divine things in a Divine light: let us endeavour to live more in a real practice of those Rules of Religious and Holy living commended to us by our ever-Blessed Lord and Saviour. So shall we know Religion better, and knowing it love it, and loving it be still more and more ambitiously pursuing after it, till we come to a full attainment of it, and therein of our own Perfection and Everlasting Bliss.

THE END.
